Enjoy a leisurely stroll in a traditional Japanese garden. The Shirotori Garden is the largest Japanese-style garden in the region with a path running along the banks of streams and ponds. A Japanese tea ceremony house Seiutei is also available in the garden to try green tea with Japanese confectionery. Shirotori Garden : <https://www.shirotori-garden.jp/english/index.html>

Osu once flourished as Nagoya's No.1 entertainment quarter, and is a place where you will find extensive shopping arcades. The area developed after the World War II as a place of electrical and second-hand clothing stores, and now the district is a proud center for nerd, idol and other sub-cultures, securing its enduring popularity. Besides 'anime' merchandise, shoppers can also pick up all manners of interesting items that individual storekeepers have in stock. It's a fun place to go even if you just stroll around.
